It is possible to have an oil boiler efficiency of up to 97% - that is, 97% of the oil's thermal energy is converted to heat. In the UK there is a scale rather unimaginatively called SEDBUK: Seasonal Efficiency of Domestic Boilers in the UK, and this defines ranges of boiler efficiency to help you narrow down your options easier. An A-rated boiler is 90% efficiency or greater.

With limited exceptions, all oil-fired boiler installations in the UK need to use a condensing type of boiler. This energy efficient boiler comes in several varieties of drain options:

- Internal stack pipe
- External gully or drain
- Custom-made soak away
- Waste pipe
- Rainwater hopper

Oil boilers can still take different forms, according to the home's plumbing: □

- Combination oil boilers
